

Vancouver. One more boatload of Tamils coming: expert

POSTMEDIA NEWS SEPTEMBER 8, 2010

Public Safety Minister Vic Toews said Tuesday there is a "possibility" that other migrant ships could be destined for Canada. "I don't want to talk too much about an operational issue," he told reporters. But he added that the arrival last month of 492 Tamil migrants aboard the MV Sun Sea was "seen as a bit of a test ship" and that there is "certainly a possibility of other ships coming to Canada." Toews follow on the heels of a report that more Tamils are gathered in Thailand waiting for a ship to collect them and bring them to Canada. "The same network ... are in the process of collecting people, to pay to come to Canada," said Rohan Gunaratna, of the International Centre for Political Violence and Terrorism Research in Singapore.
